

CONTENTS

About the authors ix

Foreword xi

Preface xiii

Acknowledgements xvii

01 Wake up to the power of audio branding 1

You have an audio identity – whether you’re managing it or not 2

Audio branding: it’s not just a sound – or a jingle – but a system 3

Welcome to your worldwide language 7

On the horizon: the sound of the lifestyle gains on the sound of the product 8

The easiest big thing a company can do for a brand 10

Guest perspective: Michaël Boumendil 11

Case: SNCF 16

References 17

02 Audio branding in the digital age 19

Welcome to the new marketing landscape 20

Defining the brand 24

The value of branding: some initial ways to determine it for your brand 30

Guest perspective: Ben DiSanti and Ken Hicks 31

Case: Huggies 40

References 42

03 It’s time we came to our sensory marketing 45

Marketers have already set their sights on visual branding 46

What does taste mean in the world of sensory branding? 47

Let’s get in touch with the key idea behind tactile branding 48

Time to sniff out the status of olfactory branding 48

And now for some sound thoughts on auditory branding 50

So who should consider audio branding and why? 51

Guest perspective: Charles Spence 52

Case: Nestlé, La Roche-Posay and Louis XIII Cognac 59

References 61

04 Welcome to the world of audio branding 65

Resilience within a defined structure 66

Identify your brand's touchpoints – especially where sound design can improve the experience 66

Guest perspective: Ramón Vives Xiol 77

Case: MICHELIN 81

References 82

05 The search for your sound 85

Symbols, sounds, and structure 86

Universal vs local. Consistent vs varied 88

Six audio-branding dos and don'ts for marketers 89

Guest perspective: Mickey Brazeal 92

Case: Roland Garros/The French Tennis Open 97

References 99

06 What gets measured 103

Deconstruction and layering 105

Which creative execution? 106

A simple online questionnaire 108

Guest perspective: Gene Topper 111

Case: Intel 116

References 118

07 The audio-branding process 121

A familiar process but an exciting one 122

Brand briefing and analysis 122

Guest perspective: Neil Gains 131

Case: Atlanta Convention & Visitors Bureau (ACVB) 134

References 137

- 08 How to launch your audio brand 139
Launch approaches 140
More on the mighty Audio Style Guide 143
Audio Style Guide: an example 144
Guest perspective: Ellen Byron 149
Case: Renault 152
References 156
- 09 Maintaining and evolving your audio brand 157
United Airlines: a long off-and-on-again relationship with Rhapsody in Blue 158
Counter-intuitive but true: protect your audio brand by not playing it 160
Guest perspective: Janet Borgerson and Jonathan Schroeder 162
Case: AXA 171
References 175
- 10 Music and sound design in environments 177
The trapped audience for environmental music: the staff 178
What to do? Sorry to sound like a broken record: it's all about values 180
Bringing the shopper back to the spirit of the brand 182
Zoning and dayparting: creating specific moods within the same environment 184
Environmental sounds: great opportunities for wit and humour 186
Guest perspective: Mickey Brazeal 187
Case: Barnes-Jewish Hospital 198
References 200
- Glossary* 203
Index 207