

CONTENTS

*Foreword: The shift to professionalism in public relations,
Professor Anne Gregory FCIPR* xiv

*About Chartered Public Relations: Lessons from Expert
Practitioners, Stephen Waddington Chart.PR, MCIPR* xvii

Becoming a Chartered Public Relations Practitioner, Sukhjit Grewal, Director, Professional Development and Membership, CIPR xx

PART I The shift to the open organization – the application of public relations within every area of a modern organization 1

01 Putting citizens at the heart of public relations:
public relations and public value 3

Paul Mylrea Chart.PR, FCIPR

Notes 11

02 Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose for public relations? 14

Alan Smith Chart.PR, MCIPR

Changing some context 15

Cutting the strings 17

Then and now: what has changed, what might still change? 18

What about the media? 19

Goodbye to the good old days 21

The structure of public relations consultancies and in-house teams 24

Where to from here? 25

Notes 26

03 Death or rebirth: a digital future for public relations 27

Matt Appleby Chart. PR, FCIPR

- The impact of social media 27
- The evolution of PR practice 30
- The impact on the individual practitioner 32
- The impact on the emerging profession 33
- Death or rebirth? 34
- 2014 update: five years on 35
- Further reading 37
- Notes 38

04 Freedom of information: is it changing the way we do PR? 40

Susan Fox Chart. PR, FCIPR

- What is Freedom of Information? 40
- Why it matters 41
- Freedom of information and PR 44
- Guidance for PR practitioners 45
- The current context 47
- Blurring the lines 48
- Conclusions 49
- Appendix 50
- Notes 52

05 The future practitioner 55

Catherine Arrow Chart. PR, FCIPR, FPRINZ

- Practice makes perfect 56
- Practice by association 61
- Role forwards 64
- Further reading 66

06 Communications shared services in the public sector: an idea whose time has come or a passing phase? 69

Sally Sykes Chart. PR, FCIPR

The growth of shared services in staff functions 72

The shared services journey 75

Applying shared services principles to PR and communications 77

PR and communications shared services 78

A perspective for 2014–15: author's note 82

Further reading 83

PART II Developing areas of practice – an exploration of the opportunity in developing areas of public relations 85

07 Passport to the win-win zone? The role of psychology in public relations practice and education 87

Ben Verinder Chart. PR, MCIPR

Beyond behaviour 88

Models of excellence 89

Problem solver 91

Not the core discipline? 94

Ethical practice? 95

Further reading 97

Notes 100

08 An analysis of the role of quantification in public relations evaluation 102

Paul Noble Chart. PR, FCIPR

AVE, OTS and ROI 103

Online media 106

Share of discussion 108

Content analysis 109

Conclusion 111

Further reading 112

09 Internal communications: poor relation or powerhouse? 114

Linda Rolf Chart.PR, MCIPR

Notes 124

10 Communicable viruses: the adaptation of the public relations profession to the changing anatomy of the web 127

Matt Mckay Chart.PR, FCIPR

The anatomy of the web 128

Information viruses 128

Viral hosts 129

Monitoring and diagnoses 130

Bedside manner 131

Superbugs 133

Self-infection 136

Immunology 137

Vaccination 137

Mutation 138

Further reading 139

11 Communications micro-strategies 141

Martin Turner Chart.PR, FCIPR

Characteristics of a micro-strategy model 141

A model for micro-strategies 142

The model in depth 143

The model in action 146

Observations on the model 149

Practical examples 150

Conclusions 152

Notes 155

12 Is public relations evolving into reputation management? 156

Julie McCabe Chart.PR, FCIPR

What is reputation? 157

What is the link between PR and reputation? 157

What are the advantages of having a good corporate reputation? 159

Can reputation be managed? 159

Monitoring and measuring PR and reputation 164

Conclusion 166

Further reading 167

PART III The application of best practice in markets – an analysis of the application of public relations in different markets 171

13 Engineering the future? Using influence to benefit society 173

Anne Moir Chart.PR, MCIPR

Setting a benchmark 174

What public affairs were in place? 175

Developing a new strategic approach to public affairs 176

Building the State of the Nation's credibility 177

What made it successful? 178

Continuing success? 179

Revitalizing the learned society function 180

The dilemma 180

Getting agreement to a new approach 181

Implementing change 182

Measuring success 183

The final challenge 184

Conclusions 184

Notes 186

14 Defining the defence communicator 189

Clare Parker Chart.PR, MCIPR

Defence communications organization: background 191

Competence framework concept 192

Process of development and implementation 194

Training delivery 195

Job profiles and professional development 196

Use and engagement 198

The future of the framework and the professionalization agenda 199

Conclusion 199

Appendix 200

Further reading 213

Notes 214

15 The evolution of UK public relations consultancies from 1984 to 2009 216

Jane Howard Chart.PR, FCIPR

Evolution of UK PR consultancies 217

1984–89: The PR consultancy as a source of editorial expertise 218

1991–99: PR as part of the marketing mix 220

2000–09: More than marketing support: increasing expertise, increasing influence 222

Further reading 225

Appendix 1 226

Appendix 2 227

Appendix 3 227

Appendix 4 228

PART IV International – the impact of the globalization of markets on public relations 229

16 What does it take to be a global communications professional? 231

David Crundwell Chart.PR, FCIPR

Why are we here as communicators? 232

So what is good communication? 232

So what does it take? 233

The psychology of persuasion 234

Saying it with words, or not 235

The smell of a place 236

Plotting the future 237

Innovation and change 239

Understanding personalities at work 239

Our emotions 241

Our leaders – reaching out for the X-factor 241

The final piece of the jigsaw 244

Empathy, the link to communications 244

The final test 245

Conclusion 245

17 Globalization and national economic development: a role for public relations and communication management 246

Peter L Walker Chart.PR, FCIPR

Big push and virtuous circles 248

Big push means balanced growth 248

Market forces 249

False dichotomy 250

Reputation – image, branding and developing countries 251

From concepts to cases 252

‘Rebranding’ emerging economies 255

The role for public relations 257

Further reading 258

Notes 259

PART V Reflections – an examination of the fundamental theories of public relations and their application to modern practice 261

18 Is excellence in public relations beyond our reach? 263

Richard Flynn Chart.PR, MCIPR

What is public relations? 264

What are the models of public relations practice? 264

What do public relations practitioners do today? 266

How do these functions fit within the models of public relations practice? 267

Is the excellence model relevant today? 268

Importance of technology in striving for excellence 271

Conclusions 272

Recommendations 273

Further reading 273

19 The roadmap to excellence in public relations 274

Hilary Berg Chart.PR, MCIPR

Indicators of excellence 276

A seat at the table 277

Listening as well as telling 280

The internal audience 282

The need for strategic skills 283

An emphasis on diversity 284

Nurturing cultures 284

Considering the future 285

Further reading 286

Notes 289

20 A critical review: the four models of public relations and the excellence theory in an era of digital communication 290

Stephen Waddington Chart. PR, MCIPR

Four models of public relations 290

The excellence theory 291

Academic criticism 294

Communication in digital networks 295

New models of organizational communication 296

Memes: dynamic communication 296

Social media doesn't change anything 297

The Business of Influence 298

Switching the axis of organizational communication 299

Conclusion 300

Notes 301

Index 303

COPYRIGHT MATERIAL
NOT FOR REPRODUCTION
PUBLISHED BY KOGAN PAGE