

CONTENTS

List of contributors xii

Foreword xiii

Acknowledgements xv

Introduction 1

01 How the world has changed 9

What companies try 19

What not to do 21

References 29

02 Why businesses need a value proposition 31

A road map for success 31

Why start with a value proposition? 38

The difference between price and value 42

Realigning around a common vision 49

Customer interactions, the good and the bad 52

References 57

03 How to develop a value proposition 59

The Value Proposition Builder™ 59

Market 62

Value experience 63

Offerings 67

Value hierarchy 70

Alternatives and differentiation 71

Proof/evidence 71

Value Proposition Blueprint™ 73

See things from the customer's viewpoint 79

References 80

04 How to translate a value proposition into a sales proposition 81

Understanding what customers value 83

How customers see you 84

Identify your core skills and capabilities 85

Decide where to place propositions on the Value

Pyramid™ 86

Create customer-centric propositions 87

Choose the right sales approach(es) 90

Frame the sales proposition in the right story 95

Make sure that everything you do supports your sales propositions 95

Case studies: value propositions to sales propositions 96

References 106

05 The sales process 107

Stages of the sales process 107

What is happening at each stage of the cycle? 108

The four sales types 121

The buying cycle 122

References 128

06 The sales story 129

When does the story begin? 129

Why a story? 129

Lessons learned 143

Different sales behaviours 145

Team selling 150

References 153

07 Winning business: the 10 Laws of Value Proposition Selling 155

Law 1: the whole company plays a role in supporting the sales process 156

Law 2: the customer is part of the business system 157

Law 3: the structures and behaviours of a business must be kept in balance with each other 158

Law 4: sales behaviours must be directed towards helping the customer gain maximum value from sales offerings 159

Law 5: understand and be clear about the difference between marketing and selling 160

Law 6: ensure that all business processes support the market positioning 162

Law 7: don't try to change everything all at once; you need an evolutionary plan 163

Law 8: use the sales process as a guide and select the appropriate sales approach and style for your market positioning 166

Law 9: you can't mix your selling styles in one meeting 168

Law 10: this process – the value proposition work and organizational adjustments – never stops 169

Reference 169

08 Creating the selling organization 171

Ways to create the selling organization 174

Small, semi-autonomous teams 174

Decentralized organizations 175

Simple processes 177

Industrial democracy 177

Lean start-up 178

Clear, open culture 182

Powerful values and purpose 183

What next? 184

References 185

Appendix 1: Value Proposition Workshop survey results 187

Appendix 2: Case studies 193

About the authors 205

Index 209