

CONTENTS

Preface xi

Acknowledgements xiii

Introduction 1

01 The siren call of simplicity 5

The soundbite society 5

The growth of singularity 7

The classic brand model 11

The line extension trap 13

Singularization 14

But not any simpler 15

Managing multiplicity 17

In conclusion 19

Notes 20

02 A new brandscape 21

The spread of branding 21

Real-world branding 23

Virgin territory 27

Internal branding – looking in as well as out 30

The media revolution 34

In conclusion 39

Notes 40

03 An abdication of responsibility 43

Long live the King 43

A half-truth becomes whole 45

Ownership and an enigmatic smile 47

That vision thing 50
In conclusion 53
Notes 54

04 Proposition and positioning, marketing and branding 57

Fuzzy thinking 57
Time waits for no man... especially if he's a salesman 58
What's your position on positioning? 61
So the difference is... 64
The different roles of the customer 65
Working inside out 66
Brand, new thinking 69
In conclusion 72
Notes 73

05 The need to manage multiplicity 75

Weaving it all together 75
Multiples of multiples 75
The branding thread 76
The media thread 77
The customer thread 80
The tapestry 83
Towards a definition of multiplicity 84
In conclusion 87
Notes 87

06 A framework for managing multiplicity 89

Unfit for purpose 89
A new framework is required 91
The long-term brand philosophy 92
A brand's DNA and the missing 5 per cent 94
The go-to-market propositions 95
A real-world example 96
In conclusion 98
Notes 99

- 07 The 3Ps of brand philosophy: Purpose, principles and personality 101
- On purpose 101
 - Can you have only one purpose? 107
 - Purpose, vision and mission 108
 - On principle 110
 - Personality 117
 - When more can be less 119
 - In conclusion 120
 - Notes 121
- 08 Going to market: Brand propositions 125
- How would you sell a rainbow? 125
 - Going to market 127
 - Single-minded propositions 132
 - Powerful propositions 132
 - The same but different 134
 - Propositions come and go 135
 - What makes a good proposition? 136
 - Coherent not consistent 138
 - In conclusion 140
 - Notes 142
- 09 A new marketing mindset 143
- Old habits die hard 143
 - Are you addicted to oversimplification? 146
 - The first step is to recognize the problem 148
 - Not pure and never simple 149
 - The old mindset 150
 - The new mindset 154
 - Notes 159
- 10 Keeping it as simple as possible... but not any simpler 163
- Simple but not simplistic 163
 - Complexity is good 164

Marketing isn't branding 165
The consumer isn't always king 166
A framework not another model 167
Values have been devalued 168
Marketers need to kick their addiction 169
Notes 170

11 What's next? 171

Not the beginning of the end but maybe the end of the beginning 171
Notes 172

Index 173