

Contents

Acknowledgements ix

Other books available in the Inspire series xi

Introduction: Brands are built on trust 1

Alternative facts and the war on truth 5

Privacy as a human right and a tradable asset 5

#SkipAd vs connections with meaning 6

Conscious capitalism and brand activism 7

Price, provenance and transparency 8

Makers, innovators and outsiders 9

Reputation capital and national branding 9

The marketing of culture vs the search for authenticity 10

Truth, lies and advertising 11

The Post-Truth Brand Manifesto 12

1 Alternative Facts and the War on Truth 13

A government of lies 15

Social media, where ‘everyone has a voice’ 18

Alternative facts and fake news 21

The mainstream media vs political partisanship 22

Identity politics 26

System One and System Two 27

Disinformation warfare 29

Social media go to war 31

Facebook or Fakebook? Twitter or Twister? 35

Fighting back re: the war on truth 38

Orwell lives on 45

References 48

2 Privacy as a Human Right – and a Tradable Asset 59

Privacy + data = democracy 61

- Facebook, Cambridge Analytica and the US presidential election 62
- Personalization and customer predictive modelling 68
- Hyper-targeted advertising 70
- Privacy as collateral damage 71
- The tech counter-reaction and General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) 74
- Surveillance capitalism 77
- Privacy as a tradable asset aka ‘anonymous data monetization’ 78
- References 82

- 3 #SkipAd vs Connections with Meaning 89
 - Trust in brands has been falling for decades 90
 - #Infosmog and Adtech 94
 - If no-one notices your advertising, everything else is academic 97
 - Building ‘connections with meaning’ 100
 - Culture vs collateral 103
 - Weaponizing audiences 107
 - Brand experiences and brand movements 108
 - Brand soul 111
 - References 115

- 4 Conscious Capitalism and Brand Activism 121
 - Community-based marketing and citizen brands 123
 - Conscious capitalism vs purpose-washing 125
 - Researching in the community 128
 - Corporate social responsibility 130
 - Brand communities 131
 - Activism and the media 134
 - Sustainability and the circular economy 137
 - Activist brands and conspicuous altruism 139
 - The triple bottom line and joint value creation 145
 - References 148

- 5 Price, Provenance and Transparency 151
PWYW: Pay what you want 155
Product provenance and brand stories 157
One question: who made this product? 160
Blockchain – the benefits are hard to exaggerate 161
Alexa, buy me something ... good 164
We want control of our health 166
Who could you trust more than ‘Doctor You’? 168
And finally ... 169
References 171
- 6 Makers, Innovators and Outsiders 175
The human touch in the smart city 179
Shop small and shop local 181
Intentional buying 183
Anarchic branding 185
From ‘normal’ to ‘insane’ 188
Brand fans – getting up close and personal 190
References 192
- 7 Reputation Capital and National Branding 195
The wrong history – and which truth? 198
Branding nations – key approaches 201
Cool Britannia: linking with culture 203
Storytelling goes for gold 206
From superhumans to stereotypes 208
Britain is ... GREAT 209
Authentic branding 211
Future brand stories 213
References 216
- 8 The Marketing of Culture 219
The marketing of culture and the culture of marketing 220
#Adfail 223

CONTENTS

- Cultural icons and Parisian chic 226
- Alternative culture vs the Burning Man 230
- The search for authenticity 233
- Brand differentiation 234
- References 238

- 9 Truth, Lies and Advertising 241
 - The death industry and youth marketing 242
 - After the conquest of cool, the fightback begins ... 243
 - Getting the consumer on your side,
via anti-consumerism 246
 - How a Vietnam Vet made things personal 248
 - From gesture politics to collective action 250
 - Truth – the legacy 251
 - References 253

- 10 Summary: The Post-Truth Brand Manifesto 255
 - The Post-Truth Brand Manifesto 259
 - References 263

- Index* 265