

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements xii

Introduction 1

PART ONE: THE CONTEXT 9

1 Marketing in the world of television 11

The invisible pyramid 11
Marketers as content makers 13
Keeping a distance 14
Too many cooks? 15
The Tao of TV marketing 16
Three sides of a triangle 18
When it all comes together 20
Notes 24

PART TWO: BUILDING TV CHANNEL BRANDS 27

2 What's the point of a TV channel brand? 29

Predictions of doom 29
The Unknown Prince Charles 30
Going on safari 31
Jam decisions 32
Detectives, wrestlers and dogs 33
What's in a line? 35
Blue skies and fruit bowls 37
Ingredients of success 39
Cloudier skies 39
Notes 41

3 Relaunching a TV channel: waving a flag on the horizon 43

Share wars 43
Virgin Atlantic, Chicken McNuggets or Pampers? 44

The invisible channel	46
Flags, lighthouses and shipping lanes	47
Two little questions	48
A better version of Steve	50
‘Doing a Dave’	52
Spreading the wit	53
Law and order	54
Pawnshops and tow trucks	55
An oasis of fun	56
X marks the spot	58
Vorsprung Durch Characters	60
Updating a classic	62
Flag wavers	62
Notes	63

4 The 800lb gorillas: building a big broadcast brand 67

The big three	67
In the frame	68
Clocks and globes	69
Circle time	70
Shouting to the blue summer sky	73
‘You’re going to reap just what you sow’	75
A brand in poor health	78
A rallying cry	79
Good enough is not enough	83
The big brand builders	84
Notes	84

5 The risk takers: building a TV channel brand with attitude 87

A revolution	87
A body with arms	91
Dipping a toe	92
Brain, heart and gut	94
A fearless network	97
The risk takers	98
Notes	98

6 | Idents: giving a channel a personality 101

- Puzzles and blocks 101
- Packaging with a purpose 102
- The 2s 106
- Killing ‘boring’ 110
- Setting the blocks free 112
- The origin story 114
- An enduring role 116
- Notes 116

PART THREE: BUILDING AND PROMOTING TV
PROGRAMME BRANDS 119*7 | Marketing drama: glimpsing the future, unravelling the helix and speed dating 121

- Why it matters so much 121
- Speed dating 122
- Emotional engagement 123
- Down the lens 123
- Universal themes 126
- Glimpsing the future 128
- The three-act structure 130
- Music and rhythm 132
- Finding a voice 132
- Divide and conquer 134
- Will it work on a pencil case? 136
- Returning in the fall 139
- Notes 143

8 | Timing and other secrets:
a guide to promoting TV comedy 147

- The hardest part 147
- Crimes against comedy 148
- This time next year we’ll be millionaires 149
- Deconstruct and reconstruct 152
- Officially very funny 154
- The secret... 157

If you work in marketing, kill yourself	157
Taking the marketing on the road	159
Go out on a laugh	160
Notes	161

9 Selling the news 163

Editorial balance versus marketing reductiveness	163
Choppers, dopplers and boots on the ground	164
The fight to be first	165
Moving a mountain	167
Anchorman	168
Closer to the people	169
Making people care	169
Re-creating the News	172
The biggest stories sell themselves	172
Future challenges	173
Notes	176

10 Promoting entertainment shows: scrubbing the shiny floors 179

Pressure in the spotlight	179
Lasting brands	180
The great survivor	182
Creating an event	182
The phone lines are open now	184
Hosts or format? You decide	185
Sociable. Shareable	189
Taking the show on the road	190
Putting on the party frock	191
Notes	192

11 Documentaries and reality: stories and storytellers 195

Why we watch what we watch	195
Programmes visible from space	197
Creating factual stars	200
Child labour	202
What type of storyteller are you?	203
Seasons and stunts	205
Shark Week	206
Treat it like a thriller	207

Scoring the thriller 208
Future focus 209
Notes 210

12 Faster, higher, stronger, longer: the hyperbolic world of TV sports promotion 213

More important than life and death 213
Understanding a sports fan 215
Knowing the tribes 216
Seeing the funny side 218
Not giving it 110 per cent 220
In tune with the nation 221
Animation to avoid elimination 222
A successful campaign 223
The big ones 225
Shared memories 228
Putting the talent upfront 229
A P McCoy clings on 230
Bumping and grinding 230
'The Game Never Ends' 231
Notes 232

13 Marketing to children: nailing jelly to a moving train 235

Stories and characters 235
Involve me and I'll understand 236
Kids on screen 236
Playing along at home 237
Tracking down kids away from TV 239
The inventors of mash-up 241
An ever-changing audience 242
All the way through childhood 242
Keeping the worlds apart 243
Talking to the grown-ups 244
Kids versus Parents 245
Past and future generations 245
Rebels with a cause 246
Merchandise as marketing 247
A trusted friend 247
Showing character 248
Rewarding the viewers 249
Notes 251

PART FOUR: BUILDING BRANDS IN THE AGE OF ONLINE TV 253

14 Storyworlds: blurring the lines between content and marketing 255

A 'fatal' fall 255

Oceanic 815, The Serial Huntress and Bicycle Girl 256

Is it content or is it marketing? 258

Building early: the launch of Defiance 259

Creating immersive experiences 261

Developing characters: 'Let's Go To The Mall' 264

Sending 'love letters' to the audience 265

Keeping the storyworld alive 269

Taking the story into the real world 271

So where next? 273

Notes 274

15 Social media: from viewers to fans to friends 279

Two essential truths 279

The water cooler on steroids 280

Word of mouth amplified 281

It's all about the fans 281

A gas in your system 283

Before, during and after 284

Between the tent poles 286

Big data 288

Launching with social 288

Building a following 289

Being the first 291

Being responsive 295

Forging new bonds 295

Keep it in perspective 297

Notes 298

16 The future of TV marketing: seismic change, timeless principles 301

The enduring power of hits 301

Long live TV channel brands 303

The evolution of curatorial TV brands 304

Assertive producer brands	306
Fewer, bigger, better	307
Building an on-demand brand	308
The rise of usage-based promotion	311
Getting personal	312
A hybrid future	315
Our manifesto redux...	317
Notes	317
About the authors	321
Index	323

A bonus chapter, 'TV channel design in a multiscreen world', is available at the following url. (Please scroll to the bottom of the page and complete the form to access it.)

www.koganpage.com/TheTVBrandBuilders