

CONTENTS

About the authors xiii

Preface xv

Acknowledgements xvii

Introduction: The dehumanized workplace 1

Why philosophy matters 1

How we lost our humanity at work 3

Alienation is the curse of both leaders and led 5

How this book will work 8

Note 14

01 Who can reconnect us with our dreams? 15

Your dream job and funeral eulogy 15

Psychologists' advice about the good life 16

What's wrong with feeling good? 18

Doing what's good for you 20

Summary 22

Questions 22

Notes 23

02 Reason and passion in the humanized workplace 25

Who was Aristotle? 25

Aristotle's middle way 26

A workplace for slaves? 27

A workplace for animals? 28

Nietzsche takes us beyond reason 30

The end of moral authority 32

Breaking away from the herd 33

Life as a work of art 34

The Nietzschean workplace 35

Summary 38

Questions 39

Notes 39

03 Humanizing strategy 41

The rise of the strategist 41

Strategy and inhumanity 43

Is your strategy about capturing value from others – or creating it? 45

The Buddha's strategy advice 48

A philosophy of connectedness in action 50

From goal to path 54

Summary 56

Questions 56

Notes 57

04 Creativity and critical thinking 59

Learning from capital markets 60

Peter Lynch and asymmetric knowledge 62

Warren Buffett and market inefficiency 64

Comparisons and contrasts between Lynch and Buffett 65

Category mistakes in business 66

George Soros and human fallibility 67

Lessons of success from the capital markets 70

Popper's logic of scientific discovery 71

A Popperian theory of corporate strategy, condensed into four maxims 72

The paradox of good intentions 75

An open mind 78

Conclusion 79

Questions 80

Notes 80

05 A question of example and fairness 83

A world divided 84

Max Perutz and the Cavendish Laboratory 84

Leading in a spirit of fairness 86

Plutarch's exemplum	88
Organizational behaviour and procedural fairness	90
Fairness in practice	92
A dangerous collusion	97
Questions	98
Notes	99

06 The gift of authority 101

Introduction	101
Tell them we feel un-empowered!	101
Problem sorted?	102
What can philosophy tell us about how to use our authority to support empowered people?	103
The best of intentions	103
We get it upside down	104
Authority is a gift	106
A question of philosophy	109
Thomas Hobbes – we are born equal	110
Immanuel Kant – we are duty bound	113
The categorical imperative and leadership	115
The chief ethical officer (CEO)	118
Key ideas	120
Conclusion	121
Notes	122

07 Meaning and communication 123

The great cascade	124
Why is telling so compelling?	125
The tyranny of the tangible and the fallacy of control	126
Mistaken resistance	127
How we got here – the rise of the omnipotent leader	128
What philosophy tells us	131
The stoic philosophy	131
Understanding how we come to understand	134
Understanding as a social process	135
The road to meaning	136

Commitment to act 138
Three lessons from David Hume 139
A new way – sense making not sense giving 139
Creating a space where anything is possible 140
Summary 141
Questions 141
Notes 142

08 From engagement to encounter 143

The annual engagement survey 143
So why this approach? 145
The focus on engagement 146
Is your agenda worthy? 146
The trouble with ‘buy-in’ 148
Engagement is not the problem 149
What does philosophy tell us? 150
An alternative – encounter 151
How can we embrace encounter? 153
Implications for leadership 156
The real work 158
Changing our practices 159
Being present – a necessity for encounter 161
Summary 163
Questions 163
Notes 164

09 Values and ethical pluralism 165

A plethora of values 166
What is the problem to which a value statement is the solution? 168
Making it personal 169
In defence of values statements 170
Choosing values as though from a menu 171
The source of moral complexity 173
Objective pluralism 175

Pluralism in practice	176
Moral dilemmas and the middle way	178
Addressing dilemmas	179
The method of reconciliation	181
Conclusions	183
Questions	184
Notes	184
10 The freedom to do what you can	187
Be careful what you wish for	188
What can philosophers teach us about our freedom to act and our responsibility as leaders?	189
The incident of the cat and the wheelie bin	190
Even if organizations were prisons	191
Socrates – by force of spiritedness	192
No more sweeteners	194
The empowered organization	195
Summary	201
Questions	202
Notes	202
Index	203